What will I learn?

Most leaders recognise the importance of keeping people engaged, motivated and committed to their work and organisation. Indeed, it's a common requirement of most leadership positions. However, most leaders will also tell you that keeping people engaged, motivated and committed isn't so easy a task. Many factors influence an individual's motivation ranging from day-to-day tasks, right through to the working styles of colleagues. What is motivating for one can be de-motivating for others.

The Engaging Leader programme is a powerful one-day leadership program bringing together the latest developments in neuroscience, human motivation and emotional intelligence to help you enhance levels of motivation, commitment and engagement in your teams.

Specifically, you will:

- Identify and discuss what employee engagement is, how it's typically measured and why it's important to organisational performance
- Examine feedback on engaging leadership competencies and determine leadership behaviours you could demonstrate to enhance staff motivation and engagement
- Practice applying models and techniques for enhancing individual staff motivation and engagement at work

Is it for me?

This powerful and innovative programme will benefit anyone who wishes to improve their emotional intelligence. It is delivered by Robin Nesbitt, InspiringWays Training Associate.
